the close of the game when Rice, the visiting captain, reached the limit of five fouls and was disqualified under the rules. Though Georgetown was three points in the lead the Navy team allowed Rice to continue in the game and won out against the visitor's strongest combination.

The game was notable for the brilliancy of the individual work on both sides. Team work was somewhat deficient, though the midshipmen showed improved form along that line over the playing last Saturday. Three points was the maximum difference between the teams at any period of the game, and its extreme closeness led to the taking of unusually hard chances in shooting goals. The lineup:

New Foul Rule Works Poorly.

In the first game of the Public School Athletic League high school basketball series De Witt Clinton defeated Eastern District yesterday after noon at the Twenty-third Regiment Armory by a score of 35 to 24. The De Witt Clinton team, which is the same, man for man as last year, had a big advantage over the Brooklyn boys in its superior team, work. In the first part of the game the shooting was very poor on both sides and many easy chances for a basket were lost. The repeated fouling especially holding, made the game slow and uninteresting.

The game afforded the first opportunity for testing the new P. S. A. L. rule by which a team receives one point for each foul committed against it without shooting the goal This was intended to eliminate some of the roughness which is always more or less present in a basketball contest. The rule did not accomplish its purpose, however, and made it an exceedingly difficult matter to follow the score.

Cohen and Schick of Eastern District made the first two baskets and these were the only points tallied on field goals by their team in the first half. The passing was short, and clumsy on the part of both teams,
